National Religious Retirement Office

2025 Annual Report

For a Lifetime of Faithful Service

Dear Friends,

It is with deep gratitude that I write to you once again on behalf of those who have given a lifetime of faithful service to the Church.

Across the country, religious communities face rising eldercare costs that strain their ability to care for aging members. Nearly 19,000 senior religious need support, and these elderly religious continue to outnumber younger members, making long-term care ever harder to sustain.

These women and men religious served faithfully for decades—teaching, healing, and ministering—often for little or no pay, leaving their communities without sufficient retirement savings. Now, a projected $9.8 billion funding gap by 2034* threatens the care they need.

In 2025, the Retirement Fund for Religious distributed $40 million in Direct Care Assistance to 261 religious communities. Yet the need continues to grow as eldercare costs outpace available resources.

For those who served so faithfully, the Church must now respond with faithful care in return. Your generosity is making that care possible. In 2025, nearly 93 percent of the Retirement Fund for Religious's operating revenue came from diocesan collections and other contributions. Following a record-setting 2025 collection, continued generosity will be essential to sustaining this important support for aging religious.

Since its inception in 1988, the Retirement Fund for Religious has provided over $1 billion in assistance, ensuring that aging sisters, brothers, and religious order priests receive the dignified care they deserve. Through grants and planning for sustainability, care reaches those who need it most.

Still, the need remains urgent.

Your continued support brings security, care, and comfort to those who have given a lifetime of selfless service to the Church.

On behalf of the Retirement Fund for Religious, thank you.

In Christ,

John Knutsen
Director

Faithful Service. Faithful Care.

For decades, women and men religious have served the Church with unwavering faithfulness as teachers, nurses, parish ministers, pastors, and witnesses to the Gospel. Through the National Religious Retirement Office (NRRO), founded in 1988, the Church honors that selfless service by providing unwavering care in return.

In 2025, the NRRO achieved a historic milestone through its Retirement Fund for Religious collection, raising over $37 million. Even so, the need for funding retirement care for our religious remains.

In 2025, the NRRO distributed $40 million in Direct Care Assistance to 261 religious communities across the United States, providing vital support for aging sisters, brothers, and religious order priests. Since its inception 38 years ago, the Retirement Fund for Religious has distributed more than $1 billion—a testament to the enduring generosity of American Catholics.

That generosity reaches religious communities from coast to coast—from Carmelite sisters in Southern California to Dominicans in New York—ensuring that those who dedicated their lives to faithful service receive the ongoing care they deserve.

Yet the need persists.

With nearly 19,000 senior religious requiring support, and with a projected $9.8 billion retirement-funding gap by 2034,* the call to care for those who cared for us grows more urgent amid sharply rising health-care costs and changing demographics.

Through financial assistance, retirement-planning resources, and professional guidance, the NRRO helps religious communities address current needs while building a sustainable future.

Your steadfast generosity sustains this mission of faithful care, honoring those whose faithful service has shaped our parishes, schools, and lives.

"As a retired sister, I've seen firsthand how many of our communities struggle to meet even basic living expenses. Your kindness fills a need we could never meet on our own."

Sister Maria Ciglioni, MSCS, 87.

Supporting Those Who Served Us

"Thank you so much for your kindness," says Sister Maria Ciglioni, 87, a member of the Missionary Sisters of St. Charles Borromeo (Scalabrinians) in Melrose Park, Illinois.

Sister Maria, one of nine siblings in a devout family, was born and raised in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. Her parents' example of weekly Mass attendance and nightly Rosary left a lasting impression, while her older brother's seminary visits and the witness of the Scalabrinian sisters in her parish called her toward religious life, which she entered in February 1954.

After entering the convent, Sister Maria continued her studies in another city, launching a 40-year ministry in education. She taught kindergarten and served as a CCD coordinator for two decades, shaping countless young hearts. Yet her 22 years as a nursing home chaplain remain her most cherished, as she accompanied residents through life's final chapters and prayerfully entrusted souls to the Lord.

Now retired, Sister Maria spends her days in prayer and reflection, crafting scarves and hats for those in need. Psalm 23 remains her guiding Scripture.

She offers, openly and often, "Keep your mind engaged, spiritually and mentally, be a prayerful person, and stay close to the Lord."

By giving to the Retirement Fund for Religious, donors help cover essential costs for Sister Maria and her aging sisters. Your support ensures that they receive proper care, security, and the resources they need to continue their prayerful ministry in retirement.

Donor contributions make a lasting difference by providing retired sisters, brothers, and religious order priests and their communities with the means to access health care, maintain a safe and comfortable home, and enjoy daily necessities—helping them age with dignity and peace of mind.

"Your kindness means so much to us all," says Sister Maria, her voice warm with appreciation.

Providing Faithful Care

Since 1988, the Retirement Fund for Religious has answered a sacred obligation: to provide faithful care for the women and men religious who gave a lifetime of faithful service to the Church. With nearly 19,000 senior religious in need today and a projected $9.8 billion retirement-funding gap by 2034,* every gift carries weight. Nearly 95 percent of the annual collection's proceeds go directly to religious institutes and sustain the mission of the National Religious Retirement Office (NRRO) to meet the immediate and future needs of aging members.

Direct Care Assistance: $40 million

Gifts to the 2025 collection enabled the NRRO to distribute $40 million in Direct Care Assistance to 261 eligible religious communities nationwide. These funds help communities meet the immediate and ongoing needs of aging members, including nursing care, medications, and other essential expenses. Each gift helps meet current needs or is set aside for future care.

Management and Continuing Education Assistance: $197,247

The NRRO equips communities with tools for sound retirement planning. In 2025, funding distributions reached $197,247—an increase from $179,565 in 2024 and the highest level in the past three years. These annual grants of up to $5,000 support workshop participation, financial software, and demographic analyses, preparing institutes for long-term care needs.

Guiding Faithful Care

The National Religious Retirement Office (NRRO) walks alongside religious communities, providing expert guidance and planning support that strengthens each institute's ability to serve its aging members for life.

Retirement Needs Analysis

Central to the NRRO's work, the Retirement Needs Analysis (RNA) helps estimate the retirement-funding needs of religious institutes across the country. Using community-specific data—including the number of aging members, annual care costs, retirement assets, income sources, and projected funding gaps—the RNA provides an objective, consistent way to identify communities with the greatest need and guides the distribution of Direct Care Assistance.

Consultation Service

The NRRO offers a consultation service to assist religious communities in planning and evaluating the delivery of care for their aging members. NRRO consultants meet with community leadership, assess the quality and cost-effectiveness of care, identify areas for improvement, help with future retirement planning, review management policies and procedures, and recommend follow-up steps based on their findings.

Scenes of faithful care: supporting aging sisters, brothers, and religious order priests across the United States.

Resources and Support

Essential Mission and Educational Services

Guiding faithful care means equipping those entrusted with providing it. The NRRO offers online tools, educational programs, and other resources to help communities meet their eldercare and retirement-planning needs, both now and in the years ahead. Resources include the following:

Webinars and Virtual Workshops

Quarterly Webinars

In partnership with the Avila Institute of Gerontology, the NRRO offers quarterly webinars on topics related to aging and eldercare. All sessions are free, and webinar recordings are available in an online archive, making information readily accessible to caregivers and religious institute leaders.

Video Series

Tending the Vineyard: A five-part series with materials for leaders, board members, lay staff, and stakeholders tasked with overseeing congregational properties.

Walking Together: A series of five workshops focusing on dementia, providing caregivers with information and practical strategies that support the individual, community members, and partners providing care.

Basic Elements of a Comprehensive Retirement Plan: This five-part series offers an introduction to building a comprehensive retirement plan for religious communities of all sizes and types.

Publications

The NRRO publishes resources specifically for religious communities and care professionals. Engaging Aging shares updates, success stories, and best practices on aging, while the NRRO Newsletter provides news related to the national collection and the work of the office.

Statistical Report

Updated annually, this report summarizes the state of retirement readiness of women and men religious in the United States, including demographic data, national and regional care cost averages, and retirement-funding information.

From Our Sponsors

Dear Friends in Christ,

Your support for the Retirement Fund for Religious inspires us every day. It helps us respond to the urgent needs of our aging sisters, brothers, and religious order priests. These women and men gave themselves to the Church for a lifetime. Now, with your help, we are called to provide faithful care in return.

In 2025, your generosity supported 261 religious communities across the United States. You provided $40 million in Direct Care Assistance. This helped meet rising health-care and daily living costs. Since 1988, donor support has exceeded $1 billion. This is a remarkable legacy of faithful care that allows our mission to continue today.

Nearly 19,000 senior religious still depend on this ministry of care. A projected $9.8 billion retirement-funding gap looms by 2034.* Every dollar you contribute directly supports our aging sisters, brothers, and religious order priests. Your gift allows them to live out their final years in dignity commensurate with their lives of service.

Beyond providing direct assistance, we also support communities through retirement planning, consultation, and educational programs. This work helps religious institutes oversee their ministries responsibly.

As stewards of your trust, we promise to maximize the impact of every contribution. The time to act is now. Your continued generosity ensures that this important work will endure in the years to come.

We thank you for your partnership and ask you to renew your support by making a gift today. Your generosity directly helps our aging religious. May God bless you for supporting them in their time of need.
